CAPT. GODDARD DEAD

Millionaire Philanthropist and Civic Reformer Expires Suddenly at His Summer Home in Connecticut.

NEWFIELD, Conn., May 29.—Capt. Weston Goddard, of New York, is at his country home here, having died suddenly of hemorrhage of the brain.

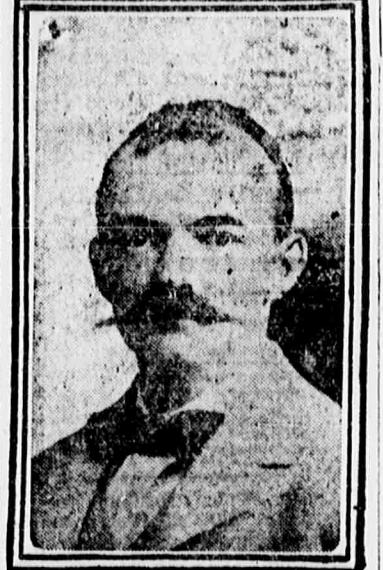

Since Mr. Goddard came here three weeks ago he has been in a weakened nervous state. It was said he was suffering from rheumatism and nervous prostration, and at one time it was believed he had been taken to a sanitarium. When this rumor reached Mr. Goddard he sent telegrams to personal friends, denying it and explaining that he was not even seriously ill.

Mr. Goddard seemed to grow stronger after coming here. He was out of doors most of the time. He was out in the sunshine on Saturday and seemed to be in worse than usual, but Saturday night had a turn for the worse and death followed early yesterday. The funeral arrangements will be completed to-day.

Foe of Policy Men.

Capt. Goddard will be best remembered as the man who killed the game of policy in New York and put "Al" Adams, the "Policy King," into Sing Sing. He was a man of great wealth, a philanthropist, a shrewd politician and an impacable foe of all that was bad in Tammany rule.

Goddard was born in 1861, and was graduated from Harvard in 1882. His father had established the house of J. W. Goddard & Sons, manufacturers and wholesale dealers in linings, the corner concern of its kind in this country. Young Goddard went into the business as soon as he left college. When his father died, he and his mother succeeded to the business, representing something like $12,000,000. Mr. Goddard gave up his luxuriously home and rented a comfortable apart-in a tenement house at No. 327 East Thirty-third street.

Work of Civic Club.

In that neighborhood he discovered a little organization calling itself the Civic Club, composed of about a dozen workmen. At once he joined it. The club took up the study of neighborhood problems. The one that struck them most forcibly was the policy game, which was taking the earnings of thousands of families.

With other influential men to aid him, the Anti-Policy Society was formed. Goddard closed hundreds of shops, but soon found it wiser to let the little fellows alone and go for the biggest, "Al" Adams. He sent Adams to prison for two years. That killed the game in this city, for the swindling character was taking the earnings of thousands of families.

Then Capt. Goddard took up the poolroom evil, and by personally making an application to the Western Union Telegraph Company for opening a first-class room, proved that this company was in league with all the rooms in this city and throughout the country. This exposure made the company abandon the pool-room service here.

Urged for Many Offices.

Capt. Goddard was the Republican in the town of Dix Hills, Long Island, President of the East Side Republican Club. He had frequently been urged for many high offices, including those of Mayor, Commissioner and Congressman. Once he gave an outline to the women and children of his district. The Civic Club has become a large and influential body.

Capt. Goddard is the widow of the wealthy family of that name. Their home was at No. 273 Lexington avenue.

Capt. Goddard leaves a widow and three children. He was also guardian of his niece Anna, a daughter of his brother, Warren Goddard, who is in Europe.
